The Iceberg Concept
(of Persistent Employee Performance Problems)

Employees who are adequately trained, equipped, and coached by their supervisors usually work effectively. When a person exhibits continuing and persistent job performance problems, those problems may have other contributions such as, underlying personal problems. Such problems are much like the "tip of the iceberg." These are warning signs that a referral to the EAP is appropriate.

Patterns of Job Performance Deterioration

Attendance
• Absenteeism/tardiness

Performance
• Decrease in quality/quantity of work
• Difficulty completing tasks or meeting deadlines
• Erratic work patterns
• Errors in judgment

Conduct
• Accidents/safety violations
• Interpersonal conflicts
• Reporting to work in abnormal condition
• Resistance to change
• Threats/workplace violence

Complex Underlying Personal Problems
• Alcoholism/abuse/misuse
• Anger/stress
• Domestic violence
• Drug addiction/abuse/misuse
• Financial problems
• Grief and loss
• Legal problems
• Marital/family problems
• Mental health issues

Identifying and confronting employee job performance problems are supervisory responsibilities. Diagnosing and attempting to treat the complex underlying causes are not supervisory responsibilities. Referral to the EAP aids the employee in finding the professional help needed to manage personal problems. A supervisor's intervention can motivate an employee to make serious efforts to resolve performance issues.
